A. Speaking and Listening
Australia has a tolerant and inclusive society made up of people from many different backgrounds. Cultural diversity is a central feature of our national identity.

In 1900, the Australian population consisted of a relatively small number of Indigenous people (estimated at 95 000) and an overwhelming majority of Europeans (3.7 million), mostly from Britain. By 2008, Australia’s population had exceeded 21 million, including people from around 200 countries.

Discuss with your family your cultural background and make a list of your family’s background in your homework book.
